The Game of Brag-Its Tendency to Deceive. It is somewhat amusing to contrast the results of electioneering contests after these results have become known, with the anticipations previously indulged in by ardent partizans. Sometimes, indeed, these anticipations are only indulged upon paper or for effect, and have little place in the real feelings or opinions of those giving them utterance. The game of brag, however, has this peculiarity, that if long indulged in it leads to deceive the person or persons indulging in it, even more than it does the public. None of us are free from ourselves, and therefore to deceive others, without, in many cases, any improper motive whatever. and need not be farther referred to.

It would be self-deception for the Democratic party to calculate upon an easy victory in the contests of the coming year, or to suppose that, under existing circumstances, she has that super-abundance of strength that will justify her in sacrificing or neglecting any element that can fairly and properly be brought to her aid. She cannot afford to fritter away her strength in squabbles upon departed issues.

The relations between the Democratic party and the South are now too well established and too generally recognised to require any particular explanation or enforcement ;-that the main strength of the Democratic party is at the South, and that the main strength of the South, in the Union, is through the Democratic party There are thousands, tens of thousands, hundreds of thousands of good Democrats at the North who are perfectly reliable upon all subjects involving the constitutional rights of the States. And we should be sorry to indulge in any sweeping denunciation of our fellow-citizens of the South who do not agree with us in politics, still the broad facts above stated can hardly be called in thing of the other isms, will require not only a united | Charlotte and parts adjacent. South, but the cordial assistance of all national men at the North.

Among the wild and reckless assertions to which insane partizanship has given rise, we do not know that we have ever seen anything to match the tirades poured forth by the Philadelphia Press, and some other northern papers upon the head of the President, in connection with the unfortunate difficulty in California, which resulted in the death of Senator Broderick of that State. The Press stops not to characterize this death as deliberate assassination, planned and instigated by the administration for the purpose of removing a political opponent, and charges that the blood of Mr. Broderick rests upon the head of James Buchanan! Such stuff as this is unworthy serious attention, and yet it is repeated

Equally improper is the insinuation that Judge Terry could be made the agent of assassination. Judge Terry is altogether a different man from that; at least we do not suppose that the intimate and trusted friend of gentlemen like Dr. Ashe, and T. H. Ashe, Esq., whom we all know, could be such a man as this sort of charge would imply.

Things are going altogether too far when crimes of the most horrid character are flippantly charged for political effect or the gratification of private malice.-The idea of James Buchanan, being the instigator or Judge Terry the agent, of assassination is perfectly out? rageous. The president has not legally noticed the libel of the Press, but if he had noticed it, the provocation was and is gross enough and reckless enough to justify him in doing so.

This much, we suppose will be could knock both or all of the next candidates for the Presidency into a cocked hat, and plenty of "professionals" could pick them off like rice birds.

But again, duels do not arise out of mere differences of opinion. In this age of the world, and in these Uniweaknesses of this kind. Look at the thing. Not long ago Judge Terry, as Chief Justice of the State of California, resisted as his oath required him to do, the process of a self-constituted Vigilance Committee. In doing so, he or some one acting with him, wounded one of the officers of the Vigilantes. For this, these people arrested him and held him in durance vile, threatening to take his life, or compel him to resign his position as Judge. He refused to reor divisions between men, or in abstract discussions sign, and dared them to carry their threats into execution. They did not dare.

> Among the men of position who leat the sanction of their names and influence to this coercion or assassingtion of Judge Terry, was David Broderick, and David When Terry speke against Broderick in Convention, the latter told the truth when he expressed his regret that Terry had not been assassinated by the Vigilant Committee. Terry naturally resented this, and did to Broderick in fair single combat, what Broderick wanted five thousand Vigilantes to do to Terry. Which is the most vulgar-meeting a man in fair fight or assassinating him by a Vigilance Committee.

> The Bulletin indulges in some witticisms over our efforts to call the attention of the people of Wilmington to the adoption of measures for availing themselves of the facilities they arready enjoy; and it also appears to be much pleased with the supposed uneasiness of the people of the East, etc. Now, we shall none the less press the enterprises we have referred to, because the Bulletin appears rejoiced at anything that gives uneasiness to the people of the East. That may be quite an element in its happiness. To base our enjoyment upon a loss to any portion of North Carolina, is what we could neither do nor understand.

Walkerism.

Surely, the people must, by this time, have grown weary of Fillibusterism under the auspices of the "grey eyed man." Where fatuity marks every movement made, and abortive attempts are the only attempts, the interest originally felt and manifested must gradually turn into pity, and finally contempt; and, in truth, we all feel that the play is played out, and it is time for the curtain to drop.

At one time we regretted the ruined health or blasted prospects of young men who might be tempted to go out with Walker, Henningsen and Company, to Nicaragua or elsewhere, but now, we must be convinced that no man, no matter how inexperienced, whose situation is not wholly desperate-who has any prospects, could be vention adjourned until to-morrow. induced to embark in such a project.

But even more fatal to the prestige of Walkerism, than any of the above considerations, is the fact now generally suspected, that the leaders did not want to get off, for they ostentatiously set a day on which to start, which was as much as notifying the authorities to keep a bright look out for them-which the authorities did Is this child's play, or what is it?

The world now is expensive. It costs a good deal of money to keep men, and likewise women alive; and the cost of making them dead has risen in proportion, so much so, indeed, that the idea of private warfare is obsolete. War now is a noble, national game, in which only princes, potentates, powers, and Baltimore rowdies are allowed to indulge with impunity. As things stand now, we think it would be decidedly advisable for our grey-eyed friend to retire " deep into the shades of private life" and abide his time, which will come or will not come, as the case may be. We think it will not come.
